

About our program:

GPR is a collaborative and educational program, meant to foster a culture of continuing practice improvement in our profession. It involves a clinic visit with a CPSA-trained standard of practice (SOP) reviewer and a follow-up meeting with a CPSA-trained physician facilitator.

GPR is designed to:

Identify group practice quality indicators and share best practices with other clinics and physicians.

Support adherence to CPSA's Standards of Practice in group practice through an SOP review.

Strengthen group practice by providing concrete and constructive feedback and resources, tailored to GPR results.

What to expect:

1. Pre-visit questionnaire

- Your clinic designates a practising physician to act as CPSA's key contact.
- The designated physician completes an online, pre-visit questionnaire.

2. Onsite standards of practice (SOP) review

- Your clinic receives an onsite visit from a CPSA-trained SOP reviewer.
- The visit includes a review of the clinic's adherence to selected CPSA standards of practice and group quality indicators, to support quality improvement.

3. CPSA physician facilitator meeting

- A CPSA-trained physician facilitator meets virtually with physicians for a 90-minute discussion about the SOP review and other quality indicators.
- Other resources are shared for further learning and reflection.

GPR is a great resource for improving clinical practice.
I would recommend all clinics go through a similar process every few years.

What to expect from your onsite SOP review:

A CPSA-trained SOP reviewer will meet with your clinic manager for approximately 2½-3 hours. The onsite visit includes:

- 1 Introduction and tour of the clinic
- 2 General clinic and exam room check
- 3 SOP review and assessment of other quality indicators
- 4 Patient chart review
Your clinic is asked to identify 10 charts containing a cumulative patient profile (CPP) within the last 12 months.
- 5 Interview with clinic manager
- 6 Wrap-up interview (30 minutes) with the clinic's designated physician to discuss next steps
